Capitulation Of Belgian Army Hits British And French Forces Hard

FIERCE ACTION IS MARKING RETREAT

British And French Troops Falling Back To New Positions

By JOHN MacVANE
International News Service Staff Correspondent

PARIS, May 29. — The fiercest rearguard action of modern warfare was reported progressing today on the northern battlefront.

French and British troops there were retreating to prepared positions in the face of German pressure that increased vastly as a result of the capitulation of the Belgian army under orders of King Leopold.

Authoritative sources said that even the British expeditionary force's retreat during the World war battle of the Marne could not be compared in ferocity to the desperate melee now raging in northern France.

National Defense Council To Meet With President

By GEORGE DURNO
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, May 29.—President Roosevelt prepared himself today for the task of issuing initial instructions to the newly revived Council of National Defense which is to coordinate and speed up the $3,300,000,000 preparedness program.

The six men and one woman—each a specialist in a vital field of national defense—will meet with their commander-in-chief at the White House tomorrow.

It was anticipated that the six cabinet officers with whom they are to advise also will be present at tomorrow's meeting.

Seven On Board

The seven called in by Mr. Roosevelt as news from Europe's battlefronts grew more ominous were Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., board chairman of U. S. Steel; William S. Knudsen, president of General Motors; Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers; Chester C. Davis, Federal Reserve board member and former head of the Agricultural Adjust-

Many Features Mark Second B. & O. Day Here

What proportion of the crowd in the dining room of the Cathedral Tuesday night, May 28, was Baltimore and Ohio railroaders and what proportion just citizens hardly seems important today. The thing that does seem important in its implication of reciprocated good will is the fact that the capacious dining room was filled for the second annual Baltimore and Ohio day dinner-dance.

Present were many of the men who handle the executive details of the company's welfare. Names like Mitchell and Iams and Reese, Baker and Van Sant, Fullerton and Lewis, titles like general manager, general superintendent, division superintendent and the like were scattered about the room like raisins in an old fashioned pudding and surrounding them were employes, their families and men and women of all walks of life in the city of New Castle.

New Tax Bill Will Be Passed

Democratic Leaders To Force New Bill Through In Record Time

EXPECT TO RAISE $700,000,000 In Tax

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Democratic leaders planned today to force a $700,000,000 tax bill through congress in record time. Republicans pledged cooperation but insisted on "mature consideration" which may prolong the session into mid-summer.

Congress appeared to welcome administration proposals to increase the debt limit by $3,000,000,000 and levy new taxes for defense, but the program opened up the possibility of bitter disputes.

Inflation Bloc Makes Demand

The "inflation bloc" moved forward with demands that President Roosevelt issue "greenbacks" against the gold reserve, or use part of the huge stock of gold and silver, to pay for defense.

The "economy bloc" called for a 10 per cent cut in all governmental expenses, other than those for defense purposes, so that an increase in the debt limit could be avoided.

Both the house ways and means committee, which must originate the tax bill, and the senate finance committe, met today. Leaders on the ways and means committee tentatively agreed to brief hearings to begin Monday with Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau as the chief witness.

While treasury experts prepared two tentative lists of taxes, it was learned President Roosevelt favors a flat 10 per cent super-tax on all taxes, estimated to raise more than $600,000,000 a year.

Tentative New Taxes

Wampum School Bonds Are Sold

Phillips, Schmertz and Company of Pittsburgh were the successful bidders on the purchase of $20,000 of Wampum school bonds on Tuesday night. Their bid was par, accrued interest and a premium of $178. The bonds call for four per cent interest.

The bonds were sold to the above company, according to Board Solicitor William McElwee, Jr., subject to the usual legalities connected with a bond issue.

The bonds are to provide for the erection of a suitable gymnasium for indoor sports in the Wampum high school. When the state condemned the old opera house, the only place for indoor sports in the village was gone. Construction will start soon on the new building.

The white arrow points to Dunkirk, the port through which Allied supplies have been coming and which now is undefended.

Three U. S. Warships Go To Europe

To Join Fleet Near Portugal

Not Convoying Any Vessels, Says Secretary Edison Of U. S. Navy

EVACUATION WORK TO BE GIVEN AID

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Three American warships steamed today to protect American interests in Europe.

The ships—heavy cruiser Vincennes and destroyers Truxtun and Simpson—are enroute to join the U. S. fleet's European squadron at Lisbon, Portugal.

Navy Secretary Edison in announcing the move gave no reason for it, beyond the broad one of protection of American interests. A hint was found, however, in the navy department reminder that the principal purpose for maintaining U. S. warships abroad is to assist in evacuation of American citizens from war zones.

Edison said the warships were not convoying any vessels. The statement apparently was made to forestall conjecture that they were accompanying the President Roosevelt, enroute to pick up American evacuees at the Irish Port of Galway.

More than 300 Americans are at Bordeaux, France, another 70 at Lisbon, with many others trying to reach these seaports, navy department officials said.

At 6:30 the dinner in the Cathedral started or perhaps it was a few minutes after 6:30. After all, dinners don't run on Capital Limited schedules. The dinner consisted of fried spring chicken and if the Baltimore guests ever tasted anything in Maryland any better they couldn't remember. The dinner was served by Chapter 440 of the Eastern Star and it was what the doctor ordered.

Rev. William F. Galvin, pastor of St. Mary's church, offered the invocation and the crowd sang "America." During the service of the dinner, Billie Glenn and her entertainers presented some orchestra music and interspersed it with some tap dancing.

R. A. Garrigus, the man who was at the throttle of the B. & O. Day engine spoke briefly in which he welcomed the guests and then introduced C. J. Directed by Ivan Servais this glee club seemed to be almost perfectly balanced, trained to a half-inch of perfection and how they sang. Attack and release with the precision of the railroad they represent. Mechanically and artistically they were glorious. At the piano was Charlotte Rodda Reed.

The glee club sang a varied group of numbers starting with their theme song "I've Been Workin' On The Railroad" and from there doing "Morning", "Steal Away", "Will You Remember", "Eight Bells", "Spirit Flower", "Bells of St. Mary", "Czecho-Slovakian Dance Song", "Cradle Song", the "B. & O. Song" and "The Lost Chord."

Mitchell Speaks

To expedite the program, all speeches were cancelled save the principal speech, that of F. B. Mitchell, general manager of the lines west. Mr. Mitchell discussed the relationship of the Baltimore and Ohio to the communities it served and was most complimentary to the local C. T. P. group, which sponsored the celebration.

Said he, "I know of no unit on the B. & O. that does this sort of thing as well as New Castle and I know of no city where the spirit of co-operation between the public and the road is so gratifying.

Mr. Mitchell spoke somewhat upon the reasons back of the decline of railroad business in the United States during the past 15 years, citing unfair water competition, increased taxes, lowered rates, and the increase in equipment costs. He was particularly outspoken in his opposition to canals, arguing that improved waterways were built at the expense of the taxpayers but that railroads had to pay their own way.

To Mail Prizes

Toastmaster Roessel announced that the winners of the essay contest staged by the B. & O. here would receive their awards by mail. The essay subject was "What The B. & O. Means to Lawrence County", and the winner of the trip to the World's Fair in New York is Robert Wilkison of Clayton street. Other prizes were cash awards.

At the conclusion of Mr. Mitchell's address Rev. M. B. Shearer, president of the New Castle Ministerial Association delivered the benediction and a few minutes later the dance started in the crystal ball room.

The second annual B. & O. Day was a real success for two apparent reasons, first the work of General Chairman R. A. Garrigus and his committees and secondly the genuine bond of friendliness that exists between the railroad and the public in this city and county.

President Daniel Willard was unable to be present at the dinner due to an official inspection. With other officials he went through New Castle early today. Many of the executives here for the dinner Tuesday night joined the Willard party at New Castle Junction.

BRIDGE REPAIR CONTRACTS LET

There was considerable difference between the high and low bid, the high bid being $36,415 by the Eichlay company of Pittsburgh.

Local Labor

Before the bid was awarded the commissioners held a conference with the three low bidders to investigate financial responsibility and the possibility of using local labor on the job.

C. W. Ortman, senior member of the firm getting the award said, "except for necessary supervision we will use Lawrence county labor on the job at Ellwood City. Quite naturally we must use some of our own supervisory force such as foremen and engineers." This was satisfactory to the commissioners and the contract was let. Ninety working days will be required for the job.

The Gardner avenue viaduct job includes painting the entire structure and relaying the floor of the span over the Shenango river with concrete.

The bids for the Graceland bridge were high, in the opinion of the commissioners. Two bidders offered bids, Mooney Brothers being low with their bid of $4,965.84. The only other bidder was Oscar Dahl of Ellwood City whose bid was $5,112.79. The engineer's estimate on the cost of the job was approximately $3,300 and the commissioners held up awarding of the contract.

IT CANNOT HAPPEN AGAIN

THREE-QUARTERS of a century ago last month, drums were stilled and flags were furled after the greatest and most sanguinary internecine war in history. Other nations have had civil wars; but none was fought on so vast a scale as was the American Civil War. Only a very few international conflicts—and those, for the most part, wars between coalitions of powers—have taken a greater toll of life and property than did the War of the States.

Out of that titanic conflict came the day which most of the nation celebrates on May 30. In some states of the South, Memorial Day falls on a different date; but the spirit which animates the solemn and tender day of remembrance, whenever and wherever observed, is the same. In this spirit neither the exultation of the victor nor the bitterness of the vanquished has part. The nation offers homage to brave men of the North and brave men of the South who laid down their lives for the right as each saw the right.

America has fought new wars since the armies of North and South laid aside their arms 75 years ago; and this day of remembrance belongs also to brave men who laid down their lives in these more recent conflicts. But Memorial Day had its origin in the War of the States and it is with the dead of that great conflict and with the all too few survivors, in North and South, of the incomparable armies of 1861-65 that this day is most intimately and poignantly associated.

Almost every great war has brought a peace which has bred new bitterness; and the American Civil War was no exception. The bitterness bred in Reconstruction days transcended the bitterness of war itself, and lasted much longer. But the healing years and the gradual passing of sectionalism have served to wipe out the greater bitterness of peace, as the bitterness of war was wiped out earlier by the brave and chivalrous men, on both sides, who had done the actual fighting.

Almost every great war, furthermore, has brought fervent pledges from strife-weary populations and their responsible spokesmen that so fearful and wicked a thing must not happen again. After international conflicts, with dreadful, unvarying regularity those pledges have been drowned out in a generation or two as new and more formidable aggressors started new and more frightful wars.

But in the case of the American Civil War the people's pledge of abiding internal peace has been kept—and will be kept forever. That which must not happen again cannot and will not happen again.

BUREAUS MENACE TO OUR SYSTEM

Although warnings have been sounded in every period of the history of the United States against the danger of bureaucratic rule, bureaucracy has grown steadily, until it now is truly a serious menace to the traditional American conception of government.

In the last few years, the wholesale transfer of authority from the states to the federal government has served to pile bureau upon bureau at Washington, D. C. And it appears to be an unbreakable rule that once a bureau is formed, it not only is never abolished, but it grows constantly.

An example chosen at random is the Graduate School conducted by the Department of Agriculture. The record shows it was organized in 1921 with 213 students of such subjects as statistical mechanics and biochemistry. Now it has 2,316 students, 140 instructors, gives prominence to the department of social sciences, and publishes pamphlets on subjects ranging through adjustment of personality.

It is not mere chance that bureaus not only continue to exist but also expand almost constantly after they are created. It would be difficult to find one that does not use every power at its command toward accomplishing just that.

In the last few years, tens of thousands of employes have been added to the federal payroll in bureaus. All of them secured their positions by appointment, and appointments notoriously are based primarily on political considerations.

Elected officials who make the appointments are, in the vast majority of cases, parties to this steady expansion of bureaucracy, for all too many of them are essentially politicians who want to fill every job available with political henchmen to assure their reelection.

Yet these are the public officials whose duty it is to protect and serve the interests of the public—men who, if they are honest and sincere to their trust, should do all in their power to reduce rather than increase the huge tax burden that goes without top-heavy bureaucracy, and should strive to eliminate the restricting and costly red tape that is the chief product of bureaus.

The chairman of an important committee told the House of Representatives recently: "When congress adjourns there will be operating the machinery of this government nearly a million people. Of that million people, when we go home, there will be only one . . . who has been elected by the people."

Better take a look at that $45,000,000,000 debt ceiling. In a short time it will be so high you won't be able to see it.

"What Is a Liberal?" asks an editorial headline. Well, there's the statesman who wants to stay in office forever, for one.

From the way things are shaping up, if the fifth column ever starts marching in the United States there'll be a lot of boys out to bust up the parade.

The Parent Problem

By Garry C. Myers, Ph. D.

GUARDING PRENATAL DIET

THE expectant mother, as soon as she supposes she is to be a mother, should go to see the doctor and should visit him thereafter at regular intervals. The doctor checks on her physical well-being and advises her, especially in reference to her diet.

During pregnancy it is more important than ever, of course, to follow good health habits, eating, sleeping, bathing, exercising and elimination; also to observe good mental health habits so as to have normal social recreation, poise and peace of mind. Toward her mental health her husband can and ought to make the greatest contribution. It is a lovely gesture and contribution to their comradeship, when he goes with her on the first visit to the doctor; and the wise doctor advises him how he best can further her physical and mental health.

Building Foods

The diet of the expectant mother is required not only to nourish her body but also the baby. For example, she needs the proper foods to nourish her teeth as well as to build bones and teeth in the baby. "Every baby costs the mother a tooth," need not be so. But it is so that the baby's teeth at birth, hidden in its gums, have already been pretty well builded.

Lime and phosphate are the two leading bone and tooth builders. Milk, therefore, comes at the head of all foods at all ages, since it contains lime and phosphate in right proportions, and fills nearly all the needs of the body. Cheese and buttermilk contain much of the same material as milk.

Ranking next are green vegetables, fresh fruits, eggs and coarse cereals—with such specific items as whole wheat bread, oranges, grapefruit, prunes, spinach, dried figs, lettuce, cauliflower, chard, peas, string beans, tomatoes, carrots, beets, Brussel sprouts, celery and asparagus. As a rule, two vegetables a day, fruit twice a day and at least six glasses of water daily are advised.

In all diet lists for expectant mothers, fats are advised in sparing amounts, the best being butter, cream, olive oil, and peanut butter (which is rich in oil.)

Rich In Vitamins

Meats—also one egg—are advised for not more than once a day, except on the doctor's orders. Cheese may be substituted for meat. Sweets are to be preferred from natural foods, as honey, syrup and dried fruits.

To provide adequate vitamins and minerals for the expectant mother, Mendenhall advises: "One quart of milk, one egg, one raw vegetable salad, such as lettuce, celery and tomato, one citrus fruit, one cooked green vegetable, two slices entire wheat or graham bread or one and one-half ounces whole grain cereal. If a helping of lean meat, potatoes, and three servings of butter and cereal or bread is added to these foods, a diet sufficient in calories and adequate, except possibly in iodine, will be furnished a normal mother. More fruit and vegetables may be substituted in place of additional carbohydrates, if the energy needs to be curtailed."

The World AND THE Mud Puddles

NO TRADE BARRIERS

Governor Lloyd C. Stark of Missouri put the matter very well when he said in a radio address recently that the trade barriers between the states are shaken, but that a good deal more battering remains to be done before they tumble completely. Within a year or such matter, in other words, state commissions on interstate trade barriers, working with various other agencies, have practically stopped enactment of new trade-hampering laws. They have obtained the repal of some others, but a good many more remain as rocks on the road of progress through free trade among the states.

Governor Stark was likewise apt in emphasizing the fact that the destruction of these trade walls is a job for civic as well as governmental forces. Here in the United States we have had the greatest free market in the world, and anything that tends to reduce it is a threat against the prosperity and well-being of every citizen. The battle against Balkanization is gaining power, however, and will be increasingly forceful as the people of the nation wake up to what shortsighted, selfish interests have been doing to it.

There is much phenomena that needs explaining. For one thing why the urge of boys to stone the daylights out of an abandoned building.

VIGOR WANTED

Mrs. Jones noted a young man slinking around outside the place and came out.

"What are you looking for?" she demanded.

"I-I-I was waiting to see Doris" said the young man.

"You'd better run along" advised Mrs. Jones. "You don't look like the sort of man she ought to have. Why, when her old man was courting me he never slunk around like you. He tore down the fence, choked the three watch dogs, broke down the door, shoved my father into a clothes closet, clapped a ring on my finger and married me that evening. We are a vigorous family, young man, and you'd better peddle your papers somewhere else."

If a president of the United States fails to conduct the affairs of his own country in a satisfactory manner, how wil he be able to tell foreign countries what to do?

"You understand dear," said a Fifth ward man to his girl, "that it will be wise for us to keep our engagement a secret?" "Oh, yes," she responded. "That's what I'm telling my friends."

Now we are told that Hollywood is confronted with a shortage of capable legs. No complaint has been made about a shortage of faces. We mean capable ones.

CAN'T ACT

"I'll sing you my latest song," the song writer told the publisher, and went ahead with the ditty. After he had finished he asked:

"Now that you have heard it, what do I get for it?"

The publisher looked troubled.

"I'm sorry that I'm not a magistrate or I would tell you," he answered.

A woman writar declares the reason that married men live longer than single men is because their wives watch out for the little illnesses that men themselves neglect. And that isn't the only reason, they live longer in some cases. The wives stand for a lot.

"You're nutty as a fruit cake" said a high school kid to his gal.

The other morning a man got home at 2 a. m. Everybody in the house got out of bed to see what time it was. A few nights later the man whacked his shins on a rocking chair and slumped to the floor, but no one heard it.

MODERN WONDERS

For several years I did all of the yard and garden work. My husband was not interested. He would sit and read the paper while I worked. But I knew he hated to see the sink full of dirty dishes. That gave me an idea. I would walk out of the house, pick up the spading fork or rake and pay no attention to the dishes. That irked him. He began "doing" the dishes and he likes it, and I continue my yard work. We get along swell now.—Nice Garden.

"That man ahead of us is asleep" said the wife in a theatre, nudging her husband. "What of it?" he asked crossly. "Why wake me up to tell me that?"

"If a stage setting shows a living room with glaring lights, bright flowered wallpaper, a red and green rug, showy lace curtains and overdecorated lamps, one expects the people who live there to come on the stage gaudily dressed, chewing gum and using a great deal of slang," write Harriet and Vetta Goldstein in their clever work, "Art In Every Day Life." And when you enter a house before knowing the people who live there can't your imagination thus picture what they will look like? If their furniture is overstuffed, I always imagine that its owners will be, also—with jowls, paunches and thick necks. Now take this same room which these clever specialists have described and make the lights soft and mellow, do the walls over in plain ivory, put subdued rugs on the floor, hang plain white curtains with attractive draperies at the windows, put in simple reproductions of classic furniture, several vases of flowers and a case of good books and your theatre audience will expect to see enter it a family of dignified, well-bred, quietly dressed people with cultured voices and natural charm.

Reader's Questions Answered

Immersed in money-making, the big business man was confessing his ignorance at a cocktail party.

THE MOCKING BIRD

He didn't know much music
When he first came along;
And all the birds were wondering
Why he didn't sing a song.

They primed their feathers in the sun,
And sang their sweetest notes:
And music just came on the run,
From all their pretty throats.

But still that bird was silent
In summer time and fall;
He just sat still and listened
And he didn't sing at all

But one night when the songsters
Were tired out and still,
And the wind sighed down the valley
And went creeping up the hill:

When the stars were all a-tremble
In the dreaming fields of blue,
And the daisy in the darkness
Felt the falling of the dew—

There came a sound of melody
The sweetest ever heard
And all the birds seemed singing
From the throat of one gray bird.

Then the other birds went playing
In the land too far to call
For there was no use in staying
When one bird could sing for all.

It is stated that many industrialists in this country are planning to hire only American citizens in their plants, where war munitions are made. That may be a very good idea as one snooker can cause a lot of trouble.

Americans can have a lot of respect for the opinions of World War veterans. They know about war and they do not want other Americans to get the same terrible knowledge they got in the last war.

What's What At A Glance

Economists Worried Over War
Are Fearful Lest Germany Win
Chances Of War Less Alarming

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist.

WHAT if Germany wins? This question wouldn't have been asked seriously when the current World war started. It was taken for granted that the Reich couldn't imaginably win. Now the problem is urgently before the Washington government's high command. It not only is a headache to army, navy and aviation experts, but to economists also.

Our economists are the worst worried.

Our army men don't really anticipate that their arm will be involved any time in the reasonably near future. Aviators, as spoken for by Charlie Lindbergh, still don't think that we're in much danger from the heavens. Lindy, to be sure, is considerably criticized for his remarks, and possibly he does overestimate himself as an international statesman. However, he's a middling good authority on the subject of aviation.

Our navy crowd has better reasons for apprehension. It's got two oceans to reckon with, and strength enough to police only one of them.

Perhaps it should be conceded that our diplomats, too, are justified in lying awake at nights, fretting. The state department folk are KEPT awake nights, anyway. Secretary Cordell Hull seldom gets eight hours of unpunctured slumber without four or five long-distance phone calls from as many different overseas capitals.

But The Economists?

The economists, though, are the chaps who occupy the anxious seats. They're not merely awakened nights. They STAY up, figuring.

Suppose the gold standard is internationally repudiated as a currency base. We had a little discussion of that chance a few days ago. Realized, it would upset our currency base fundamentally.

Suppose Germany wins the war, and corks up our foreign trade markets except for absolute indispensibles.

How'll we get rubber, tin, mercury, manganese, antimony, et cetera, if the Germans control all these sources? We ought to have thought of it sooner. We can get, for instance, tin from Bolivia and rubber from Brazil—if only we'd developed them. But we didn't.

Now they're just like our navy. They're potential, but they're not, today, available.

A Self-Supporting Country

The United States produces nearly everything it has to have. Why can't it go it alone, independently of the rest of the world?

I once put this query to the late Senator Marvel M. Logan of Kentucky, a rip-snorting good Democratic free trader. "It would work," he answered. "We can figure out our own destiny. We can't do it if we're internationally complicated. It isn't free trade doctrine, but it's logical."

Later, on the strength of this chat, I put the same quiz up to Secretary Hull.

"Couldn't we Americans," I asked, "considering how self-sufficient we are, run along pretty comfortably on 'our own'?"

"My reply would be," said the secretary, "that we could do it most UNcomfortably."

Note the emphasis.

Here's where the militarists and the economists disagree, but they diverge.

And there's economic argument in favor of a "lower standard of American living." Just how they get off on that I don't know. I wouldn't think it would be popular. Nevertheless, some of the economists are boosting for it. They say it's inevitable.

How'd the Americas' living standard be affected, either way?

There is more than pathos in some of the things heard by welfare workers. Below are some of the answers and quotations taken from a welfare worker's transcript:

"They didn't give me an opportunity to refute anything, and there was nothing to refute. . . My income is not sufficient to entertain myself . . . The first time I was arrested was in June. We was arguing over the Scripture . . . He wanted to be on the WPA so he wouldn't have to work. . . Family savings are all used up—relatives have helped."

Said by a man whose age was variously given from 76 to 84: "I can walk down the street any time, pick up a woman, go to church and be married."

One applicant when asked if he had any documentary evidence, replied: "No, we've never been sick enough to have a doctor."

The Great Game Of Politics

By FRANK R. KENT

by The Baltimore Sun (Copyright, 1940)

Both Sides Of The Street

WASHINGTON, May 29.

LISTENING to Mr. Roosevelt's fourteenth fireside chat Sunday night, it would not be surprising if those of "My Friends" with any capacity for thought at all found themselves somewhat confused. After having been told by the President hardly more than a week ago of the frightful inadequacy of our armed forces and the urgent necessity for enhancing them, they were suddenly informed that both army and navy are really in wonderful shape—far better, in fact, than they have ever been before in peacetime. Actually, said Mr. Roosevelt, the navy is in better shape than it was in the last war.

THE motive of the President in painting so handsome a picture of the present condition and equipment of both army and navy is, of course, obvious. He wanted to repudiate the criticism of General Johnson and others that a large part of the seven billions spent on the armed forces since 1933 had been "poured down a rat-hole" as had so many other billions appropriated for other purposes. It was natural enough to resent this attack, to which statements of various army officers and General Pershing lent color. A reply had to be made. Silence would have been equivalent to confession—and, of course, it is not true—that all the money has been wasted.

UNDOUBTEDLY, navy and army are in better condition now than when Mr. Roosevelt became President. Nevertheless, it is as dangerous for him to overpraise the condition as it is unfair for his critics to charge that he has done nothing at all. And overpraise it he unquestionably did. It isn't either wise or safe to depict an advance from one per cent. to two per cent. as something of which to be proud when there is urgent need for one hundred per cent. In effect, that is what Mr. Roosevelt did.

NO politician, however highly placed, ought to try—particularly in a national crisis—to play both sides of the street at the same time. It will be difficult for those who believed fully the story told by the President Sunday night of the fine condition and great improvement in the armed forces to retain their conviction, fostered by his message a week ago, that these armed forces are in a feeble and woefully inadequate state. Yet such is unquestionably the case. The truth is that while it is unfounded and unjust to say that the money has gone down the rathole, it is just as unfounded to contend that it has been spent effectively and without great waste. The testimony of all the experts negatives that claim.

AND certainly it is wrong to convey the impression, which Mr. Roosevelt clearly did, that either army or navy is a first-class fighting machine measured by modern standards. To promulgate that thought is to mislead the people in order to provide an alibi for himself. A milder way of describing it is to say that the President failed to be realistic. But it was not only in connection with the armed forces that he seemed misleading and unrealistic. For example, it is certainly misleading to convey the idea that more billions can be spent quickly and effectively for defense without relaxing in any way the so-called social legislation of the New Deal which hamstrings the industries upon which Mr. Roosevelt now calls for co-operation.

AND certainly it is unrealistic to address the nation with every appearance of candor and yet refrain from pointing out the basic fact that the huge expenditures now contemplated must be accompanied by new and heavier taxes. Not one word on this vital phase came from Mr. Roosevelt. Not once did he so much as suggest that in order to carry out this program the people must somehow pay. In no sentence does he suggest the necessity of economizing in other directions or touch upon the inevitability of higher rates. All that is to be left until after the election. Until then, apparently, it is his purpose to talk to the people as though all that had to be done was for Congress to appropriate this money and for him to spend it.

THE President is not justified in thus pushing aside the unpleasant realities. He pretends to be frank and open and he is anything but frank and open. His failure to lay the financial facts squarely before the people; his plain purpose to avoid any recommendation to Congress at this session for tax action; his refusal to even consider economies or modification of New Deal peace reforms; his praise of labor leaders, and his comment upon war profiteers—all these things gave the speech a campaign flavor distressing to those who feel that nonpartisan national unity is the great need of the hour.

IN this connection it is to be noted that nowhere in his speech did the President once refer, as he has in the past, to a desire to lift this effort above the level of politics and secure non-partisan support. Of

Attack Upon Any Of American Republics Is Challenge To All

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, May 29.—A foreign attack upon any one of the 21 American republics will be regarded as a challenge by them all, Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles declared Tuesday in dedicating a mural to Christopher Columbus in the Spanish room of the library of Congress.

Pointing out that the personal liberties which have come down as the heritage to the western world now are being destroyed in some parts of the globe, Welles added:

"In a physical sense and in a material sense, I realize that we are at last fully aware of these dangers in the Americas. There has never previously existed so comprehensive an understanding, so close a relationship, as that which fortunately —fortunately for each one of them —binds the American republics together today.

"Any act of aggression by a non-American power, whether it is committed south or north of the Equator, is a challenge to the security of all and will be so regarded by them."

"But," Welles said, "physical preparedness for war must be buttressed by normal preparedness. Too many people of this generation," he added, "have grown fat, physically and fat, mentally. They have become too preoccupied with what the government can do for them rather than with their obligations to the country and to the government.

"The price of our continued security," he went on, "is a rededication of themselves in this sense, the eternal vigilance and unselfish devotion to the public interest of those in authority, together with a continuance of effective and intimate co-operation on the part of all the governments of the western hemisphere."

Foresee Heavy Traffic In State On Holiday

HARRISBURG, May 29.—Memorial Day and the ensuing three days will be a big travel week-end in Pennsylvania because of numerous events taking place all over the state, Richard P. Brown, secretary of the State Department of Commerce, said today.

Governor Arthur H. James will speak at the Memorial Day services at Gettysburg National Military Park.

A re-dedication of Fort Augusta, English outpost of colonial days, will take place at Sunbury on May 30. A model built on a one-sixth scale has been erected on the lawn of the museum within the actual boundaries of the original fort which was built in 1756. A large parade will precede the celebration at which prominent personages will be present.

Loretto, in Cambria county, will honor the prince-priest, Reverend Demetrius Augustine Gallitzin, on the 100th anniversary of his death. May 30 is also the 140th anniversary of the foundation of the St. Michael's school from which the present St. Francis college in Loretto evolved. A solemn pontifical mass at St. Michael's church will take place in the morning and in the afternoon there will be a historical pageant on the college grounds.

Competitive sports events will take place at various places in Pennsylvania. May 30, 31 and June 1 are the dates for the harness races at Langhorne on U. S. route 1, 27 miles northeast of Philadelphia.

Other events scheduled for Memorial Day are Delaware County Dog Show at Overbrook, a Philadelphia suburb; motorcycle races at Mechanicsburg, handicap golf tournament at Buck Hill Falls in the Poconos. The Devon Horse Show and country fair near Philadelphia began May 27 and continues to June 1.

War Relief Fund Quota Is Doubled

Chairman Norman H. Davis Says Initial Fund Will Be Inadequate

CHAPTERS ASKED TO RENEW DRIVES

In a telegram received by the Lawrence County Chapter, American Red Cross, today, National Chairman Norman H. Davis states that the initial fund of ten million dollars will be far inadequate to take care of the needs of the suffering refugees in Europe and Chapters are asked to double their quotas in order to secure a fund large enough to take care of the stupendous task facing the Red Cross.

In the meantime, contributions are still coming in to the Chapter, and more is expected to be reported this afternoon when the report meeting of the teams takes place at the Chapter office.

Additional sums reported today included $45.21 from the Plaingrove Presbyterian church and $25 from the Ecclesian club party on Monday evening.

Chairman Davis' telegram asking for more help from the Red Cross Chapters of the country, which was received today, is as follows:

"When American Red Cross asked minimum war relief fund ten million dollars no one could foresee that in two short weeks greatest tragedy in all history would be unfolded. Impossible to describe pitiful plight millions refugees in France. Sick, wounded, hungry and homeless. They cry out to us for help. Will need much more than ten million dollars. Therefore quotas originally assigned should be regarded only as minimum immediate objectives. Chapters should then go on and where possible double their quotas. In fact, only limitation should be the maximum generosity of American people. We should complete this campaign within shortest possible time."

course, it ought to be above that level, and nonpartisan support is essential, but Mr. Roosevelt can make no appeal for either now without promptly producing the unanswerable retort that it lies wholly in his power to achieve both these things. He, and he alone, can bring them about. All he has to do is to renounce his third-term ambitions. That would unite the country behind him as nothing else could.

SO long as he refuses to do that he is, in effect, a party candidate, and that is neither healthy nor helpful. It breeds suspicion and resentment. It creates an issue which beclouds the vital facts and makes unity impossible. The mere mention of the word politics would percipitate a debate as to the propriety of the President being a third-term candidate while asking for nonpartisan support in a national emergency. In such a debate Mr. Roosevelt has no ground upon which to stand. Hence he avoids the subject. It, taxes and economy are all blacklisted for the time being.

Farm Leaders Of State Will Share Program At Moose Farm On June 4

Agricultural interest in Western Pennsylvania will be directed on June 4 to the R. N. Moose and Sons farm on the New Wilmington-Volant road, when the first public inspection of the rural electrification project on the farm will be conducted.

Coming here to take part in the program will be Professor R. U. Blasingame, head of the Department of Agricultural Engineering at State College; E. D. Bayard, Editor-in-Chief of the "Pennsylvania Farmer"; G. W. Kable, Editor of "Electricity on the Farm"; and W. S. Hagar, Deputy State Secretary of Agriculture from Harrisburg. Many other men prominent in agriculture and industry will attend.

First Project Of Kind

The project, sponsored by the Pennsylvania Power Company, with the cooperation of the Department of Agricultural Engineering at State College, local chapters of the Future Farmers of America and other agencies, is the first of its kind in this section of the country. Its purpose is to determine and demonstrate the value of electrical equipment of various kinds, in making the average farm more profitable and the farm home more comfortable.

The farm is not a subsidized "model" farm. Devoted principally to the production of poultry and dairy products, it is owned and operated by R. N. Moose and sons, who selected and purchased the electrical equipment for the purpose of increasing the efficiency and productiveness of the farm. The experimental phase of the project consists of the careful measurement of the electrical use of the various devices and of the results secured thru their operation. Some fourteen electric meters are installed on individual appliances and are read daily to build up a record which can show positively the operating cost of each. By keeping equally careful records of production, the value of each device can be determined.

In Service Year

Most of the equipment has now been in service nearly a year, so that the results thus far achieved take into consideration seasonal factors. For the most part these results have exceeded expectations and have already proven the advantages of the electrical devices.

The program on June 4 includes an inspection of all the equipment and also a meeting at which Mr. Bayard will be the principal speaker. A demonstration by the New Wilmington Chapter of the F. F. A. will also be included, as will a concert by the North Beaver Township High School Band. It has been announced that the women of the Neshannock Presbyterian church in New Wilmington will conduct a stand at the farm for light lunches during the day.

A large crowd of farmers and other interested people will be attracted to the inspection; many from far and near have evidenced interest in the project since its inception and the June 4th event will be the first opportunity for the public to view it.

Dr. Dafoe's Column On The Quintuplets And The Care Of Your Children

(Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

PARENT DISCIPLINE

Has it ever occurred to you that your child gets a thrill out of causing you to lose your temper? Many a child does.

Nearly every week I get a letter from a distracted mother reading something like this: "I have done everything to train my boy, but it's no use. No matter whether I whip him, send him to bed without his supper, or try to be kind to him, he disobeys me. He never seems to realize he is wrong, and resents any kind of punishment . . ."

Child training is simply a matter of well considered discipline started in babyhood and kept up consistently. All too often parents spoil their children in babyhood and don't start to train them until there are bad habits and tempers to overcome. Or they think discipline means whipping the child. Yes, too many fathers and mothers are mistaken practitioners of "spare the rod and spoil the child."

I'm against whipping children for several reasons. There are better ways of disciplining them, and the whipping is usually done by parents when they are angry and consequently are likely to make spectacles of themselves. They go to pieces, so to speak. The child, observing things a parent does and says under such circumstances, feels a sort of power over the parent because he has been able to produce this. It makes him feel quite important. Whatever effect the whipping is intended to have is lost when he feels this way, obviously.

There is another reaction in his mind, too. If he sees his mother lose her self-control and temper over some prank of his, his respect for her is diminished. After a repetition of such incidents, he obeys her only because she is bigger and stronger than he is. Then when he is punished, he resents it and feels he is the victim of injustice. When he grows strong enough to avoid her chastisement, she loses control over him completely.

I remember reading in the works of some philosopher a pithy line: Discipline is only the art of making disciples. That's another way of saying it's the art of leadership. Leadership is what is important in raising children properly.

Leaders can incur such respect that they are followed blindly and unquestionly. The good parent is a leader something like this. But he doesn't get to be a leader by being a tyrant. He builds up respect in his child by being fair and understanding in his discipline. He doesn't close his eyes to misbehavior one day and punish for it the next. He doesn't expect children to know things are wrong without being told, and he dosen't punish them severely for things they didn't know were wrong. He doesn't punish them when he is angry and upset.

None of the Dionne Quintuplets has ever been whipped. I know they aren't angels now, but they certainly are well behaved children, normal in every way. Far better behaved, I know, than many children of whipping parents.

At the other extreme to these whipping disciplinarians are the indulgent fathers and mothers, who try to bribe their children to be good. I don't know which type of parent is worse.

Dewey Presents His Program For American Defense

Presidential Candidate Says War On Business Must Be Abandoned

(International News Service)

DALLAS, Tex., May 29.—Thomas E. Dewey, carrying his campaign for the Republican presidential nomination into the southwest, put forward his own five-point program for American defense.

Addressing a rally sponsored by the executive committee of the Texas Republican Central committee at Dallas, the young New York district attorney suggested the following defense steps:

"1. We must decide what we are going to defend. It is imperative that the army and navy know what areas they must protect.

"2. A nonpartisan national defense board to plan and direct our program of rearmament should be immediately established.

"3. The national administration must remove from office its socialists, communists and fellow-travelers.

"4. The administration must abandon its war on business. We cannot wait until next January. Enterprise must get going now.

"5. Our national morale must be revitalized."

Dewey remarked that the sympathies of the American people are "wholly and unhesitatingly with the Allied nations," but, he declared, "it is imperative that we should not allow our emotions to overcome our reason. Our first and imperative task is to create a strength of our own which must be respected.

First Lady Sees U. S. As Not Being Involved In War

(International News Service)

CAMDEN, N. J., May 29.—The United States will not go to war in Europe in the opinion Tuesday of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The "First Lady" finds youth throughout the country "tremendously bewildered" because the older generation trained it for a now nonexistent world of peace.

Young people are demanding to know, Mrs. Roosevelt said, whether America will enter the world conflict. "My answer to this question," she told the Camden County Teachers' Association, "is that this is a democratic country and that I am perfectly certain the people of the country do not want war. So you won't go to war in Europe."

Plan For Thousand Writers At G. O. P. Convention

Huge Army To Cover Sessions

Philadelphia Prepares For National Republican Convention Next Month

PREPARATIONS ARE NOW BEING MADE

By WATSON FENIMORE
International News Service Staff Correspondent

PHILADELPHIA, May 29.—Indicative of the increasing complexity of organizing a national political convention, accommodations for approximately 1,000 reporters, magazine writers, photographers, newsreel men and radio commentators will be available when the Republican Presidential Convention opens in Philadelphia, June 24.

This was disclosed by Ralph E. Williams, of Portland, Ore., chairman of the Republican National Committee's sub-committee on arrangements, in picturing behind-the-scenes activity incidental to holding a typical American nominating gathering.

Williams, who is responsible for seeing that things run smoothly once the convention chairman's gavel brings the session to order, has attended every national G. O. P. parley since William Howard Taft was nominated in Chicago in 1908.

Contrast With 1908

"I suppose there weren't 100 newspapers represented there then," he said. "The papers didn't cover it as widely as they do now and we didn't have to put in days and weeks to provide for the newspapers. Now the number of reporters has gone up to some 900."

Williams recalled that 30 years ago there were no radios, no movie cameramen and not even a public address system to be provided for. Convention speakers not blessed with stentorian voices used a megaphone to command the delegates' attention and it was not until 1920 that the Republicans set up a loud speaker arrangement at their convention, he said.

Now, however, the business of getting news of the convention's doings before the public takes a major part of the arrangement's committee's time, with television making its bow at the forthcoming session to add one more complication to the problem.

Television Makes Bow

"Each year," Williams explained, "something new comes along such as television and we are called upon to make arrangements for it. And for all these innovations we must be prepared in order to keep up to date. The press details, of course, are one of the biggest jobs, but we are pretty well lined so far."

Williams said that 740 seats have been set aside for working newspapermen in the press gallery at Convention Hall, the site for the meeting. Approximately 125 additional seats have been reserved for representatives of weekly papers, 100 magazine writers and 50 for radio news men. In addition, press services and newspapers have set up newsroom and wire facilities in the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, the G. O. P. headquarters.

Other parts of Williams' job include the establishment of a "hospital" and a staff of 25 physicians at Convention Hall and taking care of such details as lighting, finding a corps of 150 ushers and cooperating with the city for policing. A special housing committee allots rooms to delegates and other visitors.

$200,000 Will Be Spent

Every cent of the $200,000 guaranteed the Republican National Committee by the City of Philadelphia when it won the meeting will be spent on these arrangements, Williams said.

"The entire $200,000 will be spent right here in Philadelphia," he asserted, "and possibly much more. Some people think the money is used to bring delegates, but not one cent goes to the delegates out of this fund. They pay their own expenses."

Typical of convention costs, Williams added, are $7,000 for lighting and $7,000 to $9,000 for tickets of admission to the hall.

Oak Street Pupils Present Program

Annual Outdoor Garden Festival Is Given On Tuesday Afternoon

Amid a beautiful setting of flowers, the Oak street school pupils presented their annual outdoor Garden Festival on Tuesday afternoon, with a large attendance of parents and friends present for the occasion.

A play, entitled, "Grandmother's Garden," pictured grandmother, surrounded by old fashioned garden flowers. Featuring the play were a number of songs about flowers. Music was under the direction of Misses Frances Carlon, Katherine Lienert, and Letty Remley. Interspersed throughout the play were a number of garden dances, which had been prepared under the direction of Misses Marie McElroy and Helen Hinkson, health teachers.

The stage properties, with backgrounds depicted flower scenes were the product of the art department under the supervision of Miss Frances Carlon. The program was presented under the direction of Miss Mary Ramsey, auditorium teacher.

The play cast included:

Grandmother, Marjorie Sciullo; Gardener, Thomas Watt; grandchildren, Wilma Walker and Elbert Jay; flower searchers, Marie De Luca and Robert Florida; Betty, Anna Kane; Dick, Billy Hanna; Delores, Ruth Sanfilippo.

The entire program seemed an appropriate farewell from Miss Dart to the parents, as she has been known throughout the city as a garden enthusiast and a connoisseur of rare old flowers. She will retire at the end of the present term after spending almost a half a cenutry as a teacher and principal in the city schools.

Before closing, Miss Dart was presented with a beautiful corsage by the children.

Chemurgy Turns Waste To Profit

New And Remunerative Industry Developed In California

HAVE DISCOVERED MANY SUBSTITUTES

By ED LABOWITCH
International News Service Staff Correspondent

SACRAMENTO, Cal.—There's an old saying that goes: "You can't squeeze blood out of a turnip."

That may have been true in grandpappy's day, but today science is putting that old saw to rout. Through chemurgy and waste utilization, worthless or near worthless materials are being changed into something valuable.

Chemurgy is a new word intriguing Californians, but for a score of years or more chemists have been working on the problem of putting to use what man throws away.

In America it is becoming an economic addition to industry; in Germany it is a national necessity.

"Ersatz" A German Word

"Ersatz" is a word Germany sprung on the world a few years ago when her chemists began making bread out of sawdust and cloth out of hair clippings from the barber shops. Absence of raw materials forced Germany to utilize every ounce of scrap paper, bone, sawdust and even fingernail parings.

America, in searching for new industrial frontiers, has found in chemurgy—ersatz—synthesis—call it what you will—a new and remunerative industry.

However, besides utilizing waste, California industries are turning to seemingly worthless plants and chemicals for new materials with which to work. Among these are thistles, wormwood, sassafrass, all sorts of weeds, and cotton gleanings.

Chemurgy, therefore, takes these varied forms.

1. Turning waste into something useable.

2. Synthesis—making something useable out of something valueless—like weeds into rubber or cotton lint into cellophane.

3. Hydroponics—Growing plants without soil in mineral impregnated water.

Of course chemists haven't been able to squeeze blood out of a turnip—yet—but given a head start they could make a silk purse out of a sow's ear.

Cascade Park Is In Readiness

Season To Open At Recreation Resort Of City On Thursday

Final touches are being put on at Cascade Park, in preparation for the opening day, Thursday, Memorial Day.

The amusement concessions have all been repainted and ready for operation, and the remodeled restaurant, also on the recreation center, is ready to serve the public.

The grove has all been cleaned up and the tables and benches for the accommodation of picnickers, have been set in place. The kitchen has been repainted. This building, with its splendid accommodations, and over a dozen gas burners for the free use of patrons, is a boon to all who attend the park outing.

After about three months intermittent work, the basin of the lake has been cleaned out, and the lake refilled. The yacht and rowing boats have been "dolled up" for the coming season. Cushion seats have been placed in the yacht, which plies the lake. These cushions could be used as lifebelts in case of emergency.

Superintendent C. C. Coulthard states that 365 new seats have been ordered for the main floor of the Community Hall, which may arrive today. Summer benches enough to seat about three hundred, are now in use. It is believed the hall will seat comfortably about 750 persons and will have properly arranged wide aisles.

The many flower beds have all been planted and are coming along nicely.

Says Ford Company Could Build 1,000 Planes Each Day

(International News Service)

DETROIT, May 29—Mass production of airplanes far exceeding President Roosevelt's demand for 50,000 planes a year appeared possible today when a Ford Motor Co. spokesman said the company could produce 1,000 planes a day within six months.

This is approximately one-fourth of the current daily automobile output, but the spokesman indicated that in time the planes might roll from the assembly line nearly as fast as cars do now.

But the spokesman said today that a change over from the production of cars to fighting ships calls first for elimination of "red tape" as well as advice from leading aviation authorities.

LONDON REPORTS BRITISH FORCE IS STILL INTACT

ditionary force now is located. But they emphasized the troops have not lost their cohesion and are being admirably supported by the French.

Simultaneously with this declaration, Reuters (British) New Agency circulated a Paris dispatch stating the situation on the northern front was not clear, according to French authorities.

Violent Battle

This report added that an extremely violent battle was in progress and added that French units still held the French channel port of Calais last night.

(Germany previously claimed occupation of Calais by its forces.)

The French channel port of Dunkerque was heavily bombed, Reuters added, but not directly threatened.

News that the B. E. F. in Belgium is intact and withdrawing toward the coast came as thoughts of all England focussed on the Flanders fields and the nation awaited final official word regarding the fate of the British forces..

Soldiers of the B. E. F. were pictured by authorities as furious with rage against the Germans, not so much because of the pounding they received aerially and by tanks and artillery, but "because of the incredibly revolting deeds they have seen performed by German airmen and tanks."

Seek To Create Panic

According to these sources, "women and children were deliberately machine-gunned and slaughtered in order to create panic among civilians." Further describing these alleged scenes, a British military spokesman said:

"Men of the B. E. F. have seen tanks charging down and deliberately crushing men, women and children.

"These things shall never be forgotten and will insure that if the Germans attempt an invasion of Britain they will get the hottest reception received anywhere."

It was added that while a majority of the B. E. F. is in the northern zone pocket a great part of British war material is not located there.

After a night in which rumors flew and seethed—as was natural under the circumstances—British officials said there had been no change in the situation of the hard-pressed gallant army, caught in the "pocket" wrought by German mechanized forces.

But with the position of the B. E. F. rendered doubly grave by King Leopold's surrender of the Belgian army to Germany, Britain was ready for news of the gravest kind.

On all sides it was realized that escape of the British force by sea was only a slender hope and that a break through the German corridor to join up with the Allied forces to the south was a possibility equally remote.

NAZI PRESSURE ON ALLIED ARMY MUCH INCREASED

issued by the French high command told of the struggle in these terms:

Heavy German Losses

"Our troops are resisting desperate enemy efforts in the north with admirable valor.

"Certain information enables it to be affirmed that losses sustained by the Germans during the fighting yesterday and last night were particularly heavy.

"On the Somme and Aisne rivers, local actions were carried out successfully. An enemy raid south of Chateau Porcien was repulsed.

"There was no important activity east of the Aisne."

While the communique did not mention the reported French offensive in the Somme River valley, a major movement was understood to be underway in that area, aimed at rescuing the Allied army trapped in the northern pocket.

A French spokesman said the French forces along the Somme had recaptured three villages and were attempting to wipe out the last bridgeheads held by the Germans on the southern bank of the river.

Allies Still Hold Coast

French and British soldiers, it was claimed, were inflicting such "terrible" casualties upon the Germans that even German press dispatches were "forced to admit" a heavy Nazi toll.

Paris authorities claimed the coast north of Calais and past Dunkerque is still solidly held by the Allies and that late last night Allied elements were still battling German forces in the streets of Calais.

Allied planes, they said, were maintaining a ceaseless bombing of German troop concentrations in harrassing actions which were intensified beyond anything imagined at the outset of the battle of Flanders.

BERLIN REPORTS GERMAN TROOPS STORMING YPRES

the cordon into three parts, and complete annihilation is just a step away, the German statement announced.

While the situation became increasingly critical on the western front, a British war communique officially claimed capture of the northern Norwegian port of Narvik.

French spokesman in Paris said the British and French were retreating to prepared positions before the impact of German pressure which increased as a result of the surrender of the Belgian army under orders of King Leopold.

"Terrible" casualties were being inflicted upon the Germans by the British and French soldiers, Paris reports stated.

By PIERRE J. HUSS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

BERLIN, May 29.—Rapidly-moving German troops in a slashing new offensive have split apart the half million or more French and British troops trapped in Flanders and Artois, capturing Ostend and Lille, and have stormed Ypres and Mt. Kemmel to the south, it was officially announced in Berlin today.

As in the World War, Ypres and Mt. Kemmel were British strongholds. Their fall opens a final wedge enabling the Germans to pierce and shatter the British expeditionary force.

The great ring of steel surrounding the Allies in France and Belgium has been divided into three parts, military quarters said, isolating the French and British and hastening "an annihilation now expected to be completed in short order."

In the Valenciennes-La Bassee-Lille region, the sack encloses a crack French army, believed to approximate 250,000 men.

Claim Forces Trapped

Another cell now created between Armentieres and the Menin region has caught both French and British groups while a big net from Cassel over the Franco-Belgian border to and beyond Ypres as far as the channel coast has trapped the entire British expeditionary force.

(Editor's note: This army originally was estimated at 400,000 men. It is believed that at least half of this number has been safely evacuated across the channel.)

The British are now suffering a merciless hammering by air and land, German military quarters said. Neither the British nor the French have much chance of surviving as compact units or even as forces scattered over the landscape, it was said.

German possession of the whole channel coast is now a matter of hours, German authorities declared. The next stage of the Nazi campaign then will be launched, with speculation keen as to the direction it will take.

In any case, it was said, southern England remains under the easy domination of German long range guns and the Reich's air force.

Meanwhile, German spokesman accused France and Britain of making King Leopold of Belgium the scapegoat of their military debacle. The king himself alone will decide whether or not to report to public accusations of treason and cowardice made against him in London and Paris.

Pirates Defeat Cincinnati 5-2

St. Louis Cardinals Start And Finish With Same Pitcher For Change

By ED KIELY
International News Service Sports Writer

NEW YORK, May 29.—Admitted the whole business sounds a little screwy, but yesterday the Pittsburgh Pirates won a game and a St. Louis Cardinal pitcher worked an entire nine innings. Take a gander at the National League ledger today and you will find the information is entirely authentic.

Pirates Trim Reds

And to make the story all the more fantastic, the Pirates took the measure of the classy Cincinnati Reds for their victory and Max Lanier, the Cardinal hurler, apparently making sure he would not be yanked, pitched a shutout against the Chicago Cubs.

Big Max Butcher, who was chased from the mound in his first four starts, found his magic and allowed the Reds only five hits, including Billy Werber's sixth homer of the year. Meanwhile, Butcher's mates bunched eight hits off Junior Thompson and Johnny Hutchings to snare a 5 to 2 triumph.

At the same time, Lanier was having little trouble with the Cubs, allowing them only four hits. This game was a pitcher's duel until the sixth when the Cards bombarded Verne Olsen to the showers with a four run barrage. St. Louis added a final run in the seventh to walk off with the 5 to 0 honors. Rain halted the New York at Boston contest.

Dodgers Top Phils

A record crowd of 28,918 turned out for the first Brooklyn night game of the season at home to watch the Dodgers halt the Phillies 4 to 2, thereby capturing their fifth straight game and gaining a full game over the second place Reds. Fat Freddy Fitzsimmons won his fourth straight victory in holding the Phils to six hits.

The New York Yankees owned their longest winning streak of the season—four games—after copping both ends of a double header with the Washington Senators. The Yanks slugged their way to a 12 to 4 victory in the opener and returned to win the nightcap, 3 to 1. The world's champions are now in fourth place in the American League.

Browns Win Two

The St. Louis Browns surprised the Chicago White Sox by working up enough steam to sweep a twin-bill, 10 to 9 and 7 to 5, and Detroit made it two in a row over the Cleveland Indians when they rallied in the late innings to win, 8 to 5.

The Boston Red Sox handed the Athletics their fifth straight defeat, 4 to 1, before a crowd of 27,151 at a night game in Philadelphia. The Sox bunched a half dozen hits in the last two innings to overcome a 1 to 1 tie.

Tales in tidbits....Lawrence County won't be represented in the coming National Open June 6, 7, and 8. Angelo "Dykes" Monsey, New Castle Field Club pro and John Kardish, one of Ellwood City's top ranking performers, were among the 99 district niblick swingers competing for one of the 10 qualifying posts allotted the tri-state district. The localities failed to hop into charmed circle.....

Monsey whipped across a pair of 77's for a 154 score. Kardish shot two 81's for 162. While neither of the Lawrence Countians qualified, a neighboring athlete crashed through with flying colors. Andy Gaspar of Slippery Rock not only was among the 10, but was tied for top honors with a sensational 144. He was deadlocked with the famous Ray Mangrum. The qualifying tests were staged at the Westmoreland Country Club, Pittsburgh a few days back.....

In the ring also will be Frankie Moran who has returned from the Pittsburgh district. His opponent will be Nick Retardo at 135 pounds. This will be a severe test for Frankie as he usually balances a scale at 128 pounds. The fans can rest assured the other bouts will be good, especially the Willie Davies vs. Benny Bartle, 175-pound slug-match.

James Martin, secretary, today reported the Lawrence loop will hold a meeting of officials and managers at the sport goods store, at 8:30 p. m. Friday. The teams play, hence the late convening hour. Martin also reported that his team, Bessemer, suffered a severe loss when Wayne Puromaki broke an ankle playing against Brent. The secretary also said the umpires this year deserve a bouquet for their officiating. Coming from a manager, it is a bouquet, in our opinion. The White Sox, Martin reports, haven't won a game but they've forced all the other teams to play heads-up ball and that's something. Financially speaking, Martin claims that it costs $12 to start a Lawrence County loop game, hence the plea for support this season.

UNIVERSITY HALL IS REBUILT IN STYLE OF 1770

(International News Service)

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—Reconstruction of University Hall at Brown University as an exact replica of Brown's original "college edifice" of 1770 is nearing completion.

The cupola is designed from an old drawing and from portions of the original bell tower discovered under more modern housing last August.

Most of the detail of the new hall has been inspired by the John Nicholas Brown House and the Avis Brown House in Providence, and by the Caleb Clapp House in Boston. These homes are considered the finest old New England structures still standing.

Furnishings are designed to recall eighteenth century drawing rooms.

FOREST TOWER IS STRATEGIC POINT FOR SCENIC VIEWS

HARRISBURG — Many of the state's most beautiful scenic views, embracing thousands of acres, may be obtained from the 144 forest fire observation stations maintained for the detection and location of forest fires, according to a statement by George H. Wirt, Chief Forest Fire Warden.

These observation stations are located on the highest peaks of Pennsylvania's mountains and overlook practically all the woodlands of the state. Steel towers vary in height from 60 to 80 feet and are manned during the forest fire season by observers who are equipped with binoculars, weather recording instruments, range finders, radios and maps for locating fires.

The effectiveness of these towers during the past spring fire season was clearly demonstrated by the promptness with which fires were reported and organized crews dispatched to them.

From all indications the present spring fire season has been favorable and the acreage burned is less in comparison with that of former years. The excellent forest fire record this spring may be attributed, in part, as the result of an intensive campaign and training of fire wardens and fire fighting crews. The fire control organization as a whole was better prepared and equipped to combat forest fires this spring than in any previous year.

According to Chief Forest Fire Warden Wirt, tree foliage in the northern tier counties of Pennsylvania has not advanced as rapidly as in the southern and central parts of the state and the danger from fire still exists. Forestry officials, he stated, will not relax their vigilance until the woods are sufficiently green and damp so as to remove all fire danger.

State Industries To Provide Basic Plane Materials

HARRISBURG, May 28.—Whether or not Pennsylvania aircraft manufacturers will participate in the proposed vast expansion of United States' aircraft production, many of this state's industries will be needed to supply the basic materials and parts, State Commerce Secretary Richard P. Brown pointed out today.

"Aluminum," for instance," said Brown, "is extensively used in the body construction of modern airplanes Pennsylvania, already the nation's largest producer of aluminum and its products, and possessing the most favorable condition for expansion, must of necessity handle a large share of the greatly increased demand for this lightweight metal.

"A similar case is that of glass, whose aircraft uses include the construction of cockpit covers and turrets, the insulation of electrical equipment, and the covering for precision instruments. For here again, Pennsylvania is the nation's largest producer, having not only the advantage of proximity to fuel, superior transportation facilities and reserves of skilled labor, but also extensive deposits of high-grade glass sand. These latter are of such purity that they were used in making the great 200-inch Palomar telescope mirror.

"Among other items entering into the construction of airplanes, a large part of which will have to be supplied by Pennsylvania industry since our state, by virtue of being either the largest or among the largest producers in either industry, has the necessary facilities, include steel (for structural use and bearings, etc), leather (seats), motors, precision instruments, electrical equipment, radio apparatus, and wire (electrical, bracing and control cables)."

Commenting upon present aircraft construction in Pennsylvania, Secretary Brown said a survey made by the State Planning Board discloses the idustry was producing more than $2,000,000 worth of planes and parts annually before war started in Europe. The state has a dozen plants directly engaged in this industry.

Laurel Blossom Fetes Are Planned

HARRISBURG, May 29.—Several Pennsylvania communities have reported laurel observance plans to the State Department of Commerce.

Pocono laurel blossom festival events begin June 15 and last about ten days during which hotels in that resort region feature social affairs.

Brookville, in Jefferson county, is publicizing Laurel Blossom Tours from June 15 to July 1 and Rhododendron Blossom Tours from July 1 to July 15. The most profuse laurel blooms appear in the fields north of Brookville on route 36 as well as in the entire vicinity. Clear Creek Forest Park is suggested as a picnicking spot for those making the tours. Both laurel and rhododendron bloom abundantly in Cook Forest, north of Brookville. Reynoldsville, Clarion and Punxsutawney, the last of which holds an annual rhododendron festival.

Red arrow marks along the various roads in the Brookville area direct the tours.

An Inter-State Laurel Festival, in which communities throughout northern Pennsylvania and southern New York state will participate, originates in Wellsboro June 21 and lasts three weeks. A laurel queen will be selected from representatives from various towns in the section. The winners will receive a trophy and $100 in cash.

FROM ME TO YOU

By MESEEALL

Last Sunday when the water services were held a parade preceded the event . . . in that parade one lone doctor walked . . . now there are several more doctors that are eligible for Memorial Day maneuvers. The same goes for lawyers . . . now if these boys are afraid of receiving blisters from walking . . . here is an idea that might not ease their mind . . . their friends, patients and clients march in the Memorial Day parade. . . . Tomorrow is Memorial Day and a large crowd is expected to turn out for the event in the morning . . . let's see the doctors and lawyers . . . if they have no respect for their brothers who are no longer here . . . how can they expect the civilian brothers to have any respect.

If you want a nice dog . . . here is the home of one . . . you might want to see it so be on your toes . . . they don't last long . . .

M. W. McCracken, New Castle, R. D. No. 4, Harlansburg Road. Phone 8120-J2 . . . This dog is a black and white cocker spaniel. 4 months old, male. Will make a fine pet.

Now in case you missed that dog here is another one here in town . . .
Shifman, 102 W. Wallace Ave. Phone 2989-M (call after 5 o'clock). Half spitz, male, one and half years old. Good watch dog but yet very kind. Color, white and tan.

In a moment of silence . . . A PRAYER.

God of the Everywhere, bend down and fold them
Under Thy wings—where e'er the suff'rers be!
God of all Knowledge, in Thy keeping hold them,
We, of the Earth gray mist, trust them to Thee!

God of all Times and Tides, lay touch of healing
On doubt—suspense—bruised body—soul of pain;
Help us to trust the purpose, love-revealing,
Which at the last will make Life's tangle plain.

Stock Market Firmer Today

Leaders Advance From 1 To 2 Points On Broad Front Today

By LESLIE GOULD
(International News Service Financial Writer)

NEW YORK, May 29.—The stock market grew firmer in quiet trading today, with leaders advancing 1 to more than 2 points on a broad front.

Dealings were extremely light from the start, and first-hour sales shrunk to 160,000 shares from 640,000 in the early selling rush Tuesday.

Domestic business news included a rise in electric power output to the best level since mid-March and an intensive buying movement for steel, both from domestic consumers and the allies.

Steels, chemicals and coppers led the quiet advance in stocks. Bethlehem, Allied Chemical, DuPont, Johns-Manville and U. S. Smelting were among the leaders to chalk up extreme gains of 2 or more points.

Scores of representative stocks climbed a point or more. Included were U. S. Steel, Youngstown Sheet & Tube and Crucible in the steels; Kennecott, Phelps-Dodge and Cerro De Pasco in the coppers; General Motors and Chrysler in the motors; Consolidated Aircraft, Lockheed and American Air Lines in the aviations; Montgomery Ward in the mail orders; Lima Locomotive and American Car & Foundry in the rail equipments; Public Service of N. J. in the utilities; American Telephone; U. S. Rubber, and American Can.

Rails, utilities, electrical equipments and oils showed fractional improvement.

VITAMINS IN RHYMES

(International News Service)

BERKELEY, Cal. — Modern tots may soon be learning an up-to-date Mother Goose rhyme in which the little pig had—not roast beef—but vitamins. This was indicated today in a report by Dr. E. H. Hughes of the University of California College of Agriculture, in which he pointed out that pigs, as well as human beings, need their vitamins.

Local Man Invents Machine To Warn Of Lighting Storms

Old Man Electricity, bugaboo of power companies, no longer can leap unannounced into the city. In fact, as soon as Old Man Electricity begins to stutter or static, whatever one desires to term his didoes, W. H. Luikart, New Castle Line Superintendent of the Pennsylvania Power company knows it; that is, if the electric storm is within a radius of 50 or 60 miles.

No doubt his worries are fewer and gray hairs are not likely to make uncalled for progress, owing to the ingenuity of A. M. Stump, radio technician for the Pennsylvania Power Company, because the technician, after working for more than a year has invented and put into practical use a Storm Recorder which it is said possesses advantages over a barometer. It is now operating in the line department. It is the only recorder of its kind.

Fortified with an expert knowledge of radio, Stump more a year ago decided to arrange some kind of a "machine" which would record an approaching electrical of lightning storm. True, the line department has a barometer but it records approaching rain storms. It might be explained that rain storms are no serious affairs unless, of course, the storms are of the cloudburst variety and are accompanied by wind, interpolated by electric bolts.

Inexpensive Yet Good

Securing an ordinary open-face box, some radio equipment and a recording meter he applied his knowledge and workmanship and it wasn't long until in his home he had his storm recorder, which also might be termed a static recorder, working perfectly. He kept the "machine" which operates on radio principle in his home until recently, when, realizing that he perfected it, placed it in service in the Line department where it is now in use by the Power company.

In fact, it is an electricity or static detective. It is operated as a radio. The machine is dialed in an open channel. It has nine ordinary radio tubes. It has a 65 foot aerial. The radio section is connected with a meter recording chart. Whenever en electric storm arrives within 50 or 60 miles of this city the Storm Recorder picks up the fact and the impulses are recorded in red ink on a circular meter chart. The chart also denotes the time and intensity of the storm. The machine chimes and vari-colored lights flash on the radio part.

As Old Man Electricity arrives closer his didoes are more heavily inscribed and the man in charge of well-being of the power company lines, Superintendent W. H. Luikart has an opportunity to warm subordinates with the result that each is at his post ready to replace burned out fuses or what have you concerning current delivery. The circuit of the machine is a tricky though found true, combination built for this machine.

Official Praise Recorder

It was unnecessary for the power company to purchase an avalanche of supplies or provide the radio technician with a laboratory for his "invention." To be precise, officials had no knowledge of his device until Stump began installing it in the Line Department. Having been installed May 23 , it already has functioned, recorded all recent storms and today not only Stump but his superior, Superintendent W. H. Luikart, wear "easier" countnances.

"I like it" said Superintendent Luikart. "It gives advance warning of a lightning storm and records it in red ink on a meter chart. An electrical storm once within a 50 to 60 mile radius is picked up and by telephonic communication we can establish the position and direction of the storm. At the end of a year we have a complete record of when and how intense the storm was."

Stump, modest over what appproappriately might be called an invention, says it has its advantages over a barometer which record only atmospheric pressure. The barometer does not tell the tale of an on-coming electrical storm. The electrical storms are the jinx of power companies, far more than any rain storm, according to the Line Department officials.

It is the only device of its kind in the Pennsylvania Power Company. It cost not more than $20.00, to build. The only other machine of its type is one owned by the Commonwealth and Southern which has photo cells to photograph lightning. It is highly complicated. The local device does everything it does, except photograph the lightning, reports state.

No diphtheria deaths in Erie in five years!

That is next to the best record of any U. S. city.

Scranton had no diphtheria deaths during 1939.

Of eight large cities, Philadelphia had fewest deaths.

Diphtheria is gradually and certainly being eliminated.

Yet Reading led all cities in its diphtheria death rate.

Parents are urged to have their children immunized now.

The best time is between the 9th and 12th month of life.

Many children will first enter school in the fall.

Among these will be those neglected ones not immunized.

They especially need this protective measure.

Pennsylvania has 100 needless diphtheria deaths each year.

Television May Aid Aviation In Near Future

Would Enable Pilots To Penetrate Fog And Darkness With Visibility

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Application of television to aviation will give military airplanes of the future a new weapon—"televisibility"—to enable pilots to see clearly through heavy fog or darkness, it was disclosed today.

The revelation was made by Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith, prominent radio consulting engineer, in an address before the national aeronautics forum in Washington. Dr. Goldsmith, calling for the "closest possible alliance between radio and aviation" because air power is invaluable to national defense, declared that "televisibility has not been realized."

"Televisibility, in fact, would not only involve seeing by radio, but also gaining an impression of distance by radio,' he continued. "And to this there might well be added the possibility of telescopic or enlarged radio vision in the desired direction."

"When it comes into practice," he predicted, "the pilot will in effect have normal or even telescopic optical vision although he is flying in darkness and through heavy fog."

Dr. Goldsmith said that radio and television also held many other advantages for military aviation.

"With television," he stated, "it would be quite possible for airplanes to report, so to speak, concerning the earth over which they were flying by the simple process of transmitting a televised picture of such terrain back to the ground station . . . the military applications of aircraft television are obvious."

DANGEROUS TUNNEL SPAN IS COMPLETED WITHOUT ACCIDENT

(International News Service)

CHICAGO, Ill—The contractors building the 300-foot span of the subway under the Chicago river are celebrating the completion of an unusually dangerous job without a single casualty.

The greatest danger to the diggers was that they might encounter old piles that protected a swing bridge, long since torn down, on the surface but with the sawed-off parts of the supports remaining.

Luckily, the tunnel workers failed to come across a single one of these piles, which was a great break for them, for the softness of the clay in the river bed and other problems made this particular part of the subway an extremely dangerous undertaking.

Work has been started upon the new bridge spanning the Big Run in the road between Weigletown and the Harlansburg road. The road improvement has been staked out and some little work done in the way of staking and brushing.

The improvement of this road will be the next to the last step in the work of hooking up the Route 422 and the Ellwood City road with the Perry highway by way of East Brook and Volant.

Next year it is anticipated the state highway department will authorize the completion of the road between the Harlansburg Road and Eastbrook.

When the road is finally complete it will be a short route from the Beaver Valley to the Perry highway and will also be a direct route into Pittsburgh for traffic in the northern end of the county.

The bridge which will span the Big Run is on the new right of way for the highway, the road deviating several places from the old right of way to avoid bad turns. It will be an almost air line highway.

Down in Wayne and Perry townships the contractors are nearly ready to start pouring concrete for the southern abutment of the bridge over the Slippery Rock. L. A. Bedell is in charge of the bridge construction for the H. B. Jacobs Company of Pittsburgh. To get the abutment space excavated required plenty of rock excavation. The bridge will literally rest upon a bed of rock.

Tuesday was a special registration day in Ellwood City. The figures for the day's work were not available today in the office of Registrar Charles D. Ross.

Divorce court will be held Friday in both court rooms. A fairly long list of cases faces Judges W. Walter Braham and Thomas W. Dickey.

For the week ending May 25, 11 new voters registered as Republicans and three as Democrats. Five Democrats changed to Republican and six Republicans changed to Democrats.

Cromwell Against Sending Any Army To Foreign Shores

Calls For Re-Arming U. S. To Large Degree For Defense Purposes

(International News Service)

TRENTON, N. J., May 29—James H. R. Cromwell, former U. S. minister to Canada, on Tuesday called for a re-armed United States "bigger and stronger than the warlike powers that seek to dominate the world" but at the same time voiced opposition to dispatch of an American army to foreign shores.

Significantly, Cromwell remarked that recent events in Europe "make my speech delivered in Toronto on March 19, a very quiet alarm indeed from an anxious sentry at a diplomatic post who saw the shadow cast on his own country by coming events."

(Editor's note: While envoy to Canada two months ago, Cromwell said he was willing to "risk my official head" on his statement that England and France were fighting to save Democracy. This drew him a public rebuke from Secretary of State Cordell Hull a short time prior to Cromwell's announcement of his resignation to seek the Democratic nomination for U. S. senator which he won in New Jersey's recent primary.)

In an address prepared for delivery as the keynote of the Democratic state convention today, Cromwell said he was convinced that "smug complacency" offered no safety to this country and voiced warning of "the grave threat to our peace, prosperity and Democratic institutions." He added:

"I am opposed to war. I want no mother's son to be sent to foreign soil. I am against sending our soldiers to foreign battlefields. We will have security in this country only if America is bigger and stronger than the warlike powers that seek to dominate the world.

"A weak and defenseless America is an invitation to invasion. Strong and powerful America is the only assurance against the devastation and destruction of war."

SWISS ESPIONAGE PENALTY IS DEATH

(International News Service)

BASLE, Switzerland, May 29.—Denying that the move placed the country in a war state, the Swiss federal council today decided to place certain civil offenses under military jurisdiction, especially espionage which hitherto will be punishable by death.

The country was shocked by King Leopold's surrender but remained calm except for constant fear of Italian aggression.

Memorial Day

(By Edgar A. Guest)

THE POET OF THE PEOPLE

We who live our little while
Choose this day to dedicate
In our very easy style
Unto them whose gifts were great.
Now to trumpet and to drum
Strewing flowers on land and sea
To our hero dead we come,
With a day for memory!

This the day we set apart
That some little praise be said
Unto every gallant heart
Numbered with our nation's dead.
Bugler, blow the reveille!
End the day with taps once more!
We, the living, still are free
In the peace they battled for!

Large the debt to them we owe,
Great the faith in us displayed,
Shouting, even should they go,
We should follow, unafraid!
Now in freedom's name we must
Such devotion justify,
For in us they placed their trust
And for us they chose to die!
